Liberty stars put on WNBA show for college coaches

Lindsay Schnell
USA TODAY

NEW YORK – Breanna Stewart needed to rant.

“It’s about time,” the New York Liberty forward said just minutes after leading her team to an 80-66 win over the Minnesota Lynx on Sunday in Game 2 of the WNBA Finals, a victory in which she tallied 21 points, eight rebounds and a career-high seven steals.

She wasn’t referring to the much-needed win, a particular officiating call or the fact that New York set an attendance record with 18,046 fans.

No, she was calling out her college coach, Geno Aureimma, the 11-time national champion widely considered the greatest of all time.

“I text him and was like, you know what, it’s about time that you come to my game,” Stewart said as the press room chuckled. She shook her head in mock disgust. “I’ve been here for two years and he hasn’t come down! What are you doing?”

After the game, holding her 3-year-old daughter Ruby at center court, Stewart told ESPN reporter Holly Rowe that she felt the need to put on a good show for Aurieimma, since he decided to show his face at the Barclays Center.

Also sitting courtside for Game 2: C. Vivian Stringer, the first coach to lead three different teams to the NCAA women’s basketball Final Four. She did that with Rutgers most recently in 2007 – and four years later, Betnijah Laney-Hamilton starred for Stringer and the Scarlet Knights. (She retired in 2022.)

After she scored a season-high-tying 20 points, Laney-Hamilton smiled and said anytime her college coach is in the building, she wants to make her proud.

Laney-Hamilton’s performance, as she continues to battle a right knee injury, got Stringer on her feet a couple of times, and who could blame her for being so excited – especially when Laney-Hamilton started the game 4-for-4 from the field, helping the Liberty build as much as a 17-point lead.

“I was happy to be able to play well in front of her,” said Laney-Hamilton, who scored in double figures for the first time since Sept. 22 – New York’s first playoff game of 2024. She also recorded two assists and a steal.

“It gives me a little bit of momentum as we continue to go through the series,” she said. “I’ve been struggling physically, mentally, as I’ve been going through everything, so to see a glimpse of what I’m capable of, it felt really good.”

So, which college coaches of other Liberty players are coming to Minnesota for Games 3 and 4?

Sabrina Ionescu was quick to answer that in the press conference, saying that her college coach, Oregon’s Kelly Graves, would be in the Target Center on Wednesday. That means the Liberty can probably expect a big game from Ionescu and guard Courtney Vandersloot, who played for Graves at Gonzaga.

“They are all welcome,” New York coach Sandy Brondello said, laughing.

Sunday was a vintage Stewart performance, and in truth, she didn’t need her college coach on the sideline to hype her up.

Stewart is a three-time Olympian and two-time MVP for a reason. After a fourth-quarter (and overtime) fiasco in Game 1 – which included a missed Stewart free throw at the end of regulation that would have won it – Stewart said, “the moment the game ended Thursday night, I was looking forward to Sunday.”

She played like it, too. Stewart had two huge sequences in the second half.

At the end of the third quarter she drew back-to-back fouls on Liberty possessions, hit two free throws on the second, denied a Lynx shot on the other end and then hit a runner, giving New York a 61-53 lead with 55.8 seconds to go and halting any momentum Minnesota had.

Her other stretch might have been even more impressive.

With the Liberty clinging to a two-point lead, 66-64, with 5:36 left, Stewart recorded back-to-back steals on Minnesota possessions, refusing to let the Lynx tie or take the lead. New York finished the game on a 12-0 run over the final 3:21, which included a timely corner 3 from Laney-Hamilton and an offensive tip-in by Stewart.

Given Laney-Hamilton’s season, her performance might have been even more impressive than Stewart’s. Certainly it was grittier.

In July, just before the month-long Olympic break, Laney-Hamilton had minor surgery on her knee, returning to the Liberty in late July. She’s been bugged by it all season and in obvious pain for stretches. Brondello said earlier in the series that even after surgery Laney-Hamilton is not 100%.

Sunday, she praised her toughness. “She was digging deep,” Brondello said, “and that’s what we needed.”

Stewart agreed, saying, “I think what B brings is this grit, this toughness ... all of us know, she’s giving us whatever she’s got.

“We know she can do this and happy to see her get into a good rhythm with everything that’s been up and down this season and know that she’s a big factor in everything we do.”

Laney-Hamilton didn’t want to assign herself a percentage of health and declined to get into specifics of treatment, saying only that the Liberty have been “doing a little bit of everything to try to get me feeling good.”

Clearly, it’s working. But to be safe, they should probably invite Stringer – and Aurieimma – on the charter to Minneapolis, too.

Overreaction: Texas, Bama unmasked?

Eddie Timanus
USA TODAY

The top overreactions from Week 8:
● Alabama’s playoff chances cooked
It’s true that the Crimson Tide’s SEC championship hopes are likely gone with a second league loss. There might, however, still be a path to the expanded 12-team College Football Playoff.

Alabama’s last three games are quite winnable. One is a tuneup against Championship Subdivision member Mercer, and the final two league contests are against Oklahoma and Auburn, teams in a greater state of disarray.

It’s the two games over the next three weekends that will tell the tale for Alabama: a home date with Missouri on Saturday and a Nov. 9 trip to LSU. Should the Tide win both, they’ll have a fairly clear route to 10-2 with the win against Georgia also in the bank, a resume that would almost certainly be deemed playoff worthy. A split of those two and a 9-3 finish would leave matters in a much more ambiguous realm.

Whether Alabama could win the title should it be included in the at-large pool is a discussion for another day, but for now we must wait and see. We understand that patience is not an abundant quality for many fan bases, but don’t write the Tide off just yet.

● Texas is back – to mediocrity
It didn’t take long for the college football universe to move from anointing the Longhorns as title favorites to wondering aloud if they’re not ready for this new conference after all. As with many such discussions, the truth probably lies somewhere between those extremes.

As has been pointed out, the foundation upon which the Longhorns’ No. 1 ranking had been constructed wasn’t as sturdy as we might have believed given the ongoing struggles of Oklahoma and Michigan.

It is equally true that Texas is hardly the first team to be humbled by an encounter with a motivated Georgia squad. Remember how postmortems for Clemson were being written after Week 1?
In short, we’ll wait and see how Texas

Alabama wide receiver Germie Bernard is tackled by Tennessee defensive back Boo Carter on Saturday. BUTCH DILL/GETTY IMAGES responds to its first taste of adversity, starting with a visit to frisky Vanderbilt.

● Indiana is going to win the Big Ten
Most people probably didn’t believe Curt Cignetti when he made that bold pronouncement upon accepting the head coaching gig in Bloomington. But lo and behold the Hoosiers have steam-rolled everything in their path en route to a 7-0 start that now has everyone’s attention.

There’s just one teensy-weensy problem though. The penultimate week of the season involves a trip to Ohio State. We are in no way saying a win in Columbus isn’t possible.

But if the Hoosiers do come up short there, they would lose a head-to-head tiebreaker with the Buckeyes for a spot in the conference title game, assuming both teams win the rest of their games. There is no Penn State or Oregon on Indiana’s schedule, which is a plus in that all of their other contests are winnable but a minus in that there is no opportunity to offset a potential loss to the Buckeyes.

Now with all that said, the Hoosiers do very much have a strong at-large case for the playoff should they make it to the finish line at 11-1. That might seem overly ambitious for a program that has enjoyed limited gridiron success in its history, but we shouldn’t be surprised now if it comes to pass.

● Michigan could miss a bowl
On the opposite end of the Big Ten’s expectations meter we find the Wolverines, the defending national champions in name only now flailing to find any kind of offensive identity.

Aside from a home date with Northwestern, Michigan’s November slate is a veritable murderers’ row in the new-look conference.

The Wolverines will be heavy underdogs against Oregon, Indiana and Ohio State, even with the Ducks and Buckeyes coming to Ann Arbor. This makes this week’s rivalry game against Michigan State a virtual must-win if the Wolverines hope to reach the six-victory threshold for bowl eligibility.

The Spartans aren’t likely to be terribly sympathetic having their own challenging second-half schedule. But Michigan State has made progress under coach Jonathan Smith in recent weeks, and the Spartans will come into the Big House with confidence after showing they could solve a tough defense like Iowa’s.

It’s a game to keep an eye on, especially if you’re the organizer of a bowl game with a Big Ten tie-in.

● The Cougar Conundrum
What if I told you there’s a team currently without FBS conference affiliation with an excellent chance to go 11-1 – and it’s not Notre Dame? Sure, the Fighting Irish could get there as well. But there’s another non-affiliated team that could provide the CFP with an interesting test case.

Washington State, of the once-and-future Pac-12, has made it to 6-1 with its lone blemish coming against Boise State. That would be the same Broncos squad that came within a field goal of the current No. 1 team. In addition to a hard-fought Apple Cup win against former league foe Washington, the Cougars also have another Power Five victory against Texas Tech.

But now comes the bad news for the Cougars. That Texas Tech result lost some value when the Red Raiders were thumped at home by Baylor for their first Big 12 loss.

None of Washington State’s remaining opponents figure to add much to its schedule strength calculation.

As things stand, Washington State would need a whole lot of breaks to go its way to earn consideration. But complete chaos always seems to be right around the corner in this sport, so fans on the Palouse should stay tuned.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL NCAA RE-RANK 1-134

Oregon moves up to top spot

Paul Myerberg
USA TODAY

Oregon and Georgia are up, Texas is down and Alabama is way, way down in the USA TODAY Sports NCAA Re-Rank 1-134.

The Ducks are the new No. 1 after Georgia rises three spots to No. 2 after the Bulldogs’ 30-15 win Saturday in Austin. That loss sends Texas down six spots to No. 7.

That drop reflects the Longhorns’ uninspiring strength of schedule. While wins against Michigan and Oklahoma came when both teams were ranked, the Wolverines and Sooners have since dropped out of the College Football Playoff picture.

While the Bulldogs looked the part of the nation’s best team beating Texas on the road, the Ducks hold the edge thanks to an unbeaten record and this month’s win against Ohio State.

The Buckeyes stay at No. 3, followed by No. 4 Penn State, No. 5 Miami and No. 6 Iowa State.

Tennessee moves up three to No. 10 after beating Alabama 24-17. That’s two losses this month for the Crimson Tide sandwiching a narrow win against South Carolina.

That drops the Tide five spots to No. 16 and into fifth among SEC teams, trailing the Bulldogs, Longhorns, No. 9 LSU, the Volunteers and No. 15 Texas A&M. Alabama next takes on No. 23 Missouri.
